

Social partnership: role of employers and vocational schools in employment of young people

Barbora Veverková

Abstract

This thesis „Social partnership: role of employers and vocational schools in employment of young people“ deals with the issue of cooperation between schools and employers in vocational education. The paper uses theoretical background such as theory of employability, diversified system of education and dual system of education. It deals with the issue within the system set in Czech Republic and it examines the way it works. In this context, the paper shows historical background of the partnership and also its legislative background. It examines changes in consequences of new curricular reform and the making of school education programs and it brings closer look at the concept of cooperative model of vocational education. On the base of specific examples of cooperation of schools and employers it is showed how this works in our country and also in Germany, it evaluates the setting of the system and identifies its main problems.